Preamble of the speaker:

Dr Rui Oliveira Lopes is a Senior Assistant Professor of Art and Design History. Before joining FASS/UBD he was a Postdoctoral Researcher in Art History at the Faculty of Fine Arts, University of Lisbon lecturing European, Asian, and Islamic Arts, focusing on the concepts of exchange and interaction within a period from c. 1400-1800. His research is focused on the interactions between art and religion and the use of visual communication in the context of transmission of religious knowledge, and the processes of artistic negotiations and cultural representation within and between Europe and Asia during the Early Modern period. Additionally, Lopes has been studying the role of museums as a place for intercultural dialogue, the role of western museums in promoting and protecting Asian (in) tangible cultural heritage and collaborating with government institutions in the area of cultural management. Currently, he is leading a research project on museums and the formation of cultural identities in Borneo.
